@unverbraucht

UI with gnome3/shell under wayland is good. Everything is smooth and I didn't notice any glitches. The trackpad of course works perfectly as well.

btw as a hackintosh with usb wifi - I use my android phone as a wireless trackpad using Remote Mouse software. With usb tethering the phone can be both the wifi and the trackpad. However with sierra 10.12.2 I could not get the HoRNDIS software for tethering to work. Then of course there is also bluetooth tethering (after dual booting from windows for bluetooth to work) for bluetooth wifi and trackpad using Unified Remote software. But that was getting silly... 🙂
