

Erledigt

Da kommt vielleicht was auf uns zu...

Beitrag von „griven“ vom 5. April 2017, 22:24

Das Teil wäre schon definitiv ein ziemlicher Burner und passt auch zu dem was Schiller und Federighi da in dem Interview ausgeplaudert haben.

Zitat

Regarding iMacs, Schiller also said that new iMacs are in the works, slated for release some time this year (no specifics other than “this year”), including “configurations of iMac specifically with the pro customer in mind and acknowledging that our most popular desktop with pros is an iMac.”

Craig Federighi then jumped in, and said:

That is a pretty incredible evolution that we've seen over the last decade. The original iMac, you never would've thought asremotely touching pro uses. And now you look at today's 5K iMac, top configs, it's incredibly powerful, and a huge fraction of what would've traditionally — whether it's audio editing, video editing, graphics, arts and so forth — that would've previously absolutely required the Mac Pros of old, are being well-addressed by iMac. But there's still even further we can take iMac as a high performance, pro system, and we think that form factor can address even more of the pro market.

Also wird es eine Strategie mit 2 Formfaktoren im Desktop Pro Segment geben einmal als iMAC und als MacPro wobei der Highend iMAC wohl den Platz des jetzigen MacPro einnehmen dürfte und der neue MacPro dann eben das overkill Segment abdeckt eigentlich ein cooler Gedanke finde ich 😊