keep in mind that this is still a pre-release so i am not doing an official distribution now, but i prefer to have binaries in only one place which is the releases of my github repo, because otherwise there will be problems haveing a trustable place to download the latest binaries and also to sync up the app's versions beetween all the different places, but if the downloads of this site does allows to redirect to the downloads of the repo, why not, but i do prefer leaving everything in one place for simplicity, but i understand your point of view, maybe i can consider it, but i have to decide how to implement it inside the management of this project
