Patches work also wit clover

it was a my error because clover has three different places where to add patches for AMD systems 😊😊

Wise words

Even though the controversy that arose on insanelymac was initially due to the misleading title of the thread

Then corrected by the author

Then talking about security on a Hackintosh is perhaps correct for the 2% of users who understand what they are doing with their systems using bootloaders made by others.

I understand the controversy over amfipass, for example, but if you are a “senior” user, you know that amfi=0x80 was also used in the past by Dortania before kext.

Sometimes there is doubt (and forgive me for this griven) that releases are only made when certain donation levels are reached.

Another issue is that for OCLP developers, the app is not designed for Hackintoshes but for original Macs.

But I respect their choice 😊

As a user, I enjoy the benefits of their work and I always thank the OpenCore developers who have helped to safely continue our passion/hobby!
